1. DISCOVER DENVER OVERVIEW

Project Purpose

Discover Denver is a multi-year project intended to develop a comprehensive inventory of Denver's historic and architecturally significant resources. Led by Historic Denver, Inc. in collaboration with the City and County of Denver, this project utilizes advanced technology to accelerate the pace of historic resource survey and improve the consistency of data collection. Project methodology is based on the Multiple Property Documentation Approach and the Historic Context Statement framework developed by the National Park Service.

Denver covers a land area of 154 square miles and contains approximately 160,000 primary buildings. As of the beginning of the survey covered by this report, fewer than 11% of these buildings had been surveyed for historical and architectural significance. In 2018, the City and County of Denver received and approved more than 600 demolition permits. Consequently, Denver is at risk of losing many properties that tell the story of the city's evolution and the people, events, ethnic and cultural heritages, and architectural styles that make Denver a special and interesting place to live.

Recent studies have shown that economic development occurs in historic districts at seven times the rate of other areas. According to The Economic Power of Heritage and Place (The Colorado Historical Foundation, 2011) and Preservation for a Changing Colorado (Colorado Preservation, Inc., 2017), investment in historic resources creates jobs, attracts businesses, and generates income from consumer visitation and spending. The purpose of Discover Denver is to identify those special places in our community where rehabilitation and investment will preserve our city's unique identity and promote quality of life for generations to come.

Project History

Discover Denver is a multi-phase project. The project's initial methodology was developed and evaluated in two preparatory phases, the Investigative Phase and the Pilot Phase. Subsequent phases of the project have used the same base methodology, though the methodology has been refined with each new phase.

Investigative Phase - The initial phase of Discover Denver (2010-2011) focused on developing a methodology and funding plan for the project. During this phase, staff from Historic Denver, Inc., the City and County of Denver, and the Colorado Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation worked with consultants Winter & Company and an advisory committee comprised of community stakeholders. The report Denver Historic Survey: Citywide Survey Strategy was the result of these efforts. Recommendations in the report included the use of survey software and methodologies developed by the City of Los Angeles for use in its own citywide survey, SurveyLA.

Pilot Phase – The goal of the Pilot Phase (2012-2015) was to test out recommendations made in the Investigative Phase. To test the proposed methodology, three distinct pilot survey efforts were undertaken. Pilot 1 focused on a post-World War II developer-planned residential subdivision, Pilot 2 looked at 1920s small homes in two geographically distinct areas, and Pilot 3 focused on streetcar commercial districts embedded in two residential neighborhoods. An agreement with the City of Los Angeles allowed Discover Denver to use survey software developed for its own citywide survey, SurveyLA. The software was used in Pilot 1 and Pilot 2, but by Pilot 3 was determined not to be a good long-term fit for Discover Denver due to hardware costs and the level of technical support required for its use. New survey software was developed that ran on inexpensive handheld tablets. This software was used in subsequent phases of Discover Denver, Phase One and Phase Two. Field survey efforts for the Pilot Phase ended in Fall 2014, and reporting on the Pilot Phase was completed in Spring 2015.

Phase One - The first non-pilot survey phase of Discover Denver, Phase One, began in Spring 2015 and documented buildings in three Denver neighborhoods (Jefferson Park, Globeville, and Elyria-Swansea). Phase One efforts were completed in 2017.

Phase Two - Survey efforts in Phase Two focused on three survey areas (Virginia Village, City Park West, and Capitol Hill-West Cheesman), as well as sections of two of Denver's major commercial corridors (East 17th Avenue and South Broadway). Phase Two used largely the same methodology employed in Phase One of Discover Denver. Phase Two efforts were completed in 2019.

Phase Three – Survey efforts in Phase Three, the most recent phase of Discover Denver, focused on four statistical neighborhoods (Congress Park, West Colfax, Regis, and Cole), a combined survey area comprised of the western section of the Capitol Hill neighborhood and the eastern portion of the Cheesman Park neighborhood, and sections of extant streetcar commercial districts located throughout the city.

This report covers efforts in the Cole neighborhood survey area, and other Phase Three survey areas are covered in their own reports.

2. INTRODUCTION

Survey efforts in the Cole survey area began in November of 2020. All work was performed according to the general methods previously established by the project, with any changes or variations described in the Research Design and Methods section of this report. Survey of Cole took place from November 3, 2020, to April 22, 2021. Data for a total of 1,354 parcels was collected and uploaded to the Discover Denver database. As with prior Discover Denver surveys, the bulk of the properties were surveyed by trained volunteers and Discover Denver staff. Properties and districts landmarked by the City and County of Denver were excluded from the survey.

3. PROJECT AREA

The interior blocks of the Cole survey area are lined with residences dating from the 1880s to the present day. On many blocks, Queen Anne-style homes and late-19th century terraces sit next to 1920s bungalows and boxy two-story dwellings built in the last few years. One- and two-story commercial buildings are found at intersections along E. 34th Avenue, Martin Luther King Boulevard, and Williams and Franklin streets, remnants of the streetcar lines that once passed through the area.

While the southern and eastern boundary streets, Martin Luther King Boulevard and York Street, are primarily residential they are decidedly busier than the interior streets. The survey area's western boundary, Downing Street, is lined with a mix of large apartment buildings, commercial buildings, vacant lots, and older single-unit homes. Just past E. 37th Avenue, Downing Street veers to the northeast and becomes Walnut Street, giving way to single-story commercial buildings and then to large-scale apartment buildings.

The Union Pacific railroad tracks have long bordered Cole just a block to the northwest of Walnut Street. High-density development is in the process of surrounding the 38th & Blake Street light rail station, located along the railroad tracks.

The northern boundary of the survey area, E. 40th Avenue, is flanked on the north by the Union Pacific Railroad yards, and on the south by industrial buildings. The Coca-Cola plant, located along York Street at E. 38th Avenue, occupies much of the far northeast corner of Cole. The 39th Avenue Greenway, recently constructed to help with drainage, cuts from east to west along E. 39th Avenue, providing green space and an area for recreation.

While redevelopment has affected the historic look and feel of some parts of the interior of the Cole survey area, pockets of intact older buildings remain. The National Register-listed Cole Historic District, located on the 3200 and 3300 blocks of Vine and Race streets, is made up of 71 Craftsman-style bungalows and retains the look and feel of a 1920s working-class neighborhood. More commonly, blocks contain a mix of modest working-class homes from a mixture of eras, with most buildings having been altered at some point in their history.

Along the northern, western, and northwestern edges of Cole, widespread redevelopment is currently underway. Most older resources have been demolished to make way for the new buildings, and this redevelopment is creeping into the nearby Cole neighborhood.

4. RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODS

Survey Objectives and Scope of Work

The primary objective of this survey was to identify buildings within the Cole survey area having architectural, historical, or cultural significance.

A hybrid reconnaissance-intensive approach to the survey was taken. In this approach, buildings were surveyed at one of four levels: Foundation, Descriptive, Evaluation, and Enhanced. Increasing levels of detail were collected based on a building's age, historic physical integrity, and potential for architectural, historical, or cultural significance.

- Foundation Level

At the Foundation level, electronic data regarding physical location, address, year of construction, and use was collected from the City and County of Denver. All properties were surveyed at the Foundation level.

- Descriptive Level:

At the Descriptive level, all buildings thirty years of age or older, regardless of historic physical integrity, were field surveyed. One to three photographs were taken of each building, and limited information, such as architectural style, building type, and level of modification, was collected. Buildings less than thirty years of age were logged and photographed, but no additional data was collected.

- Evaluation Level:

At the Evaluation level, detailed information regarding architectural style, building type, architectural features, and setting were collected on buildings greater than thirty years of age that retained their historic physical integrity. Field evaluations were made for each of these buildings based on their potential for individual architectural significance and on whether they were located in a cluster with other buildings having significance. Discover Denver survey forms were generated for each of these resources and provided to the State Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation.

- Enhanced Level:

Historical research was performed on selected buildings having potential architectural, historical, or cultural significance, or that were good representations of the greater building stock of the Cole survey area. For each building researched, a Discover Denver Enhanced Survey Form, based on History Colorado's Architectural Inventory Form (1403), was completed. Each property was evaluated in terms of individual significance and significance as a part of a cluster of buildings having architectural, cultural, or historical significance at the national, state, and local levels.

Survey Exclusions

Buildings individually designated as historic landmarks by the City and County of Denver or those within Denver Historic Landmark Districts were excluded from the survey.

Project Participants

Discover Denver is a partnership between Historic Denver, Inc. and the City and County of Denver’s Community Planning and Development Department. Trained community volunteers and interns played a significant role in the project, performing most of the field survey and historical research under the supervision of project staff.

File Search and Previous Survey Work

Identification of resources previously surveyed was performed in Spring 2021. A number of properties have been determined officially eligible for listing in the National or State registers by the Colorado Office of Archaeology and Historic Preservation. Some of these resources have subsequently been designated at the national, state, or local level. The following resources have previously been determined eligible but remain undesignated:

Additionally, as a part of work related to the Denver Platte to Park Hill Stormwater drainage project, in 2018 and 2019 the Colorado Department of Transportation (CDOT) conducted a survey of part of the Cole neighborhood, created a historic context of the Provident Park and Hyde Park subdivisions, and evaluated the area for its eligibility as National Register and Denver Landmark historic districts. The survey determined that the Cole neighborhood's Provident Park subdivision is eligible for designation as a National Register historic district, and has potential for designation as a Denver local landmark district.

Currently Designated Resources

The Cole survey area contains individual properties and districts that have been designated as Denver historic landmarks. It also contains individual properties that have been placed in the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP) and the Colorado State Register of Historic Properties (SRHP).

Public Outreach

Public outreach occurred prior to beginning fieldwork. Discover Denver staff met with the city council representative for the Cole neighborhood to discuss the survey project and to answer any questions. Each registered neighborhood organization (RNO) in the survey area was contacted about upcoming fieldwork. A presentation was given to the Cole Neighborhood Association (CNA) registered neighborhood organization prior to beginning fieldwork.

Survey Software and Database

To collect survey data, Discover Denver uses proprietary software that runs on handheld tablets. This software allows a surveyor to choose the appropriate level of survey for each resource and to take photographs with the tablet that will automatically be attached to the survey record. A web-based user interface allows Discover Denver staff to assign properties for survey, quality-check collected data, add historical information to a survey record, and generate survey forms for each property. Additionally, project staff can export survey data through the user interface for use in analysis and reporting.

Survey Fieldwork

Survey of the Cole survey area took place from November 3, 2020, to April 22, 2021. Data for a total of 1,354 parcels was uploaded to the Discover Denver database. The bulk of the properties were surveyed by trained volunteers overseen by Discover Denver staff. Properties that are currently landmarked by the City and County of Denver were excluded from the survey. Unbuilt parcels were included in the database but noted as having been unbuilt at the time of survey, with current use (e.g., “Surface Parking”) noted in the entry.

Before survey work began in the Cole survey area, the master survey database was pre-populated with data acquired from the City and County of Denver. Pre-populated data included a unique site ID number, address and legal description, geographic information, and assessor’s year of construction for the primary building on each parcel. As survey data was collected in the field and historical research was performed, this information was attached to the appropriate survey record.

Properties expected to be surveyed during a given survey shift were “assigned” through the master survey database by Discover Denver staff, allowing specific addresses to appear on the handheld tablets used by the survey volunteers. Volunteers met the survey shift leader at a predefined location to receive specific instructions and a tablet with which to collect data. They then worked independently or with a partner to survey each building, with the survey shift leader available to answer questions as needed.

A minimum of three photographs of each building surveyed was taken by the surveyor. These generally consisted of one facade photograph and two oblique photographs. In some instances, such as corner parcels, four or more photographs were taken in order to maximize information collected photographically.

Following field survey, Discover Denver staff quality checked tablet entries against photographs to ensure accuracy and legibility of data. For volunteers who were new to the project or who demonstrated a lower aptitude relative to their teammates, 100% of entries were checked. Because the Cole survey area included a wide range of styles and types, the “Building Type” and “Architectural Style” fields were checked for most entries.

Historical Research

Historical research was performed on a select number of properties in the Cole survey area. Properties were chosen for historical research based on their potential architectural, cultural, or historical significance, or on the ability of the resource to convey the unique history and architecture of the neighborhood. In several cases, properties were chosen based on anecdotal information provided to Discover Denver by residents of the neighborhood.

Historical research included the use of Denver assessor records to determine a chain of ownership and city directories to determine residents or businesses associated with a given property. Resources available in the Denver Public Library’s Western History and Genealogy collections were used extensively. These resources included building permits, master property records, historical maps, census records, obituary indexes, and the full series of the Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Post newspapers.

Historical research was used to complete Discover Denver Enhanced survey forms and to evaluate researched properties for national, state, and local significance.

5. HISTORICAL OVERVIEW

We acknowledge with respect that the lands now occupied by the City and County of Denver are the traditional and ancestral homelands of the Arapaho, Cheyenne, and Ute Nations. These lands were also an important site of trade for numerous other Native tribes. We recognize the Indigenous peoples as original stewards of this land and their descendants that still reside here.

Cole is one of Denver's oldest neighborhoods, with a number of buildings dating from the 1880s. Because of its proximity to the city's railroad yards, early Cole was home to workers employed by the nearby smelters, packing houses, and railroads. Over half of the residential blocks in Cole were built out by 1900, with most of the neighborhood developed by 1930.

Early History

The land that makes up today's Cole neighborhood was mostly flat prairie prior to its development. In 1867, enterprising brothers Hiram and William R. Ford established a race track called Ford Park on land that Hiram had acquired through a military warrant from the United States government. The successful track was located from E. 36th Avenue to E. 38th Avenue between Race and Downing streets. Race Street received its name because it connected the Ford Park racetrack with the racetrack at the fairgrounds located just a few blocks to the north.¹

Denver's prospects were bleak in the late 1860s when the Union Pacific Railroad chose Cheyenne, Wyoming, over it as the railroad's headquarters in the Rocky Mountains. According to historians Stephen Leonard and Tom Noel, Cheyenne "boomed as Denver dwindled, prompting the Cheyenne Daily Leader to crow that "Denver is too near Cheyenne to ever amount to much."² A group of Denver businessmen refused to let the fledgling town fail, resolving that if the railroads would not build to Denver, Denver would build to them. In 1870 the upstart Denver Pacific Railroad connected Denver to the transcontinental railroad at Cheyenne, an event which likely saved the city. Two months later the Kansas Pacific railroad, a branch of the Union Pacific Railroad which originated in Kansas City, also reached Denver.

These early railroads were instrumental in the founding of the Cole neighborhood and in shaping the way it looks today. The Kansas Pacific and Denver Pacific rail lines met at 40th Avenue and Walnut Street, the northwest corner of Cole. This connection allowed the transportation of passengers and goods, such as livestock and ore, in and out of Denver. Around these rail yards rose many of the city's most important early industries, including smelters, livestock yards, and packing houses. By 1880, the Denver Pacific had become a part of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Platting and Additions

Once the railroads arrived, it didn't take long for early real estate investors to begin platting the surrounding vacant land. Most of the neighborhood was laid out for development by 1885. Cheesman and Moffat's Addition, located east of Race Street and south of E. 38th Avenue, was the last area to be developed when its plat was filed in 1902. The Cole area was annexed by Denver under the Territorial Session Laws of 1874.

Early Development: 1880s to 1900

The blocks north of E. 34th Avenue nearest to Downing Avenue were the first to develop, mostly with single-unit dwellings. The 1887 Robinson Atlas shows brick and wood-frame homes scattered on most blocks west of today's Humboldt Street. The home of Amos and Sarah Bissell, located at the southeast corner of E. 36th Avenue and Lafayette Street, was the most significant home appearing on the atlas. At the time, E. 36th Avenue was known as Bissell Avenue, named for the pioneer banker and real estate man.

David Rubidge, platter of the Provident Park Addition in 1885, built dozens of homes on the 3800 blocks of Franklin, Gilpin, and Williams streets in the late 1880s and early 1890s. While most of these homes were fairly modest, for his own family he built a grand residence at 3800 Gilpin Street. Rubidge came to Denver with his younger brother Ernest in 1871. The brothers initially worked for the Kansas Pacific Railroad, but it wasn't long before the elder Rubidge turned his attention to real estate. While Rubidge sold most of the homes he constructed, he also retained a number of houses as investment properties, renting them to workers employed nearby. City directories and census records show that many Cole rental properties were occupied by several unrelated men at a time, all working for the same employer.

A number of multi-unit residences were also constructed in Cole during these early years. Multi-unit buildings ranged from modest single-story duplexes to more substantial two-story terraces.

The majority of homes in Cole during this early period served as worker housing.³ Most early residents were northern European, including many first-generation and immigrant Irish, English, Swedish, and German individuals.⁴

From its earliest years, the railroad influenced industrial development along the northern edge of Cole. Railroad tracks ran just a few blocks to the west of Cole's western boundary at Downing Avenue, and a major Union Pacific Railroad railyard, maintenance facility, and hospital for railroad employees sat just north of E. 40th Avenue. East of Franklin Street a railroad spur arced southward off these northern tracks, serving several lumber-related businesses including the Hallack Lumber Company and the planing mill of J.R. Parr.

Streetcar lines crisscrossed the city in the late 1880s and early 1890s, stretching Denver's boundaries in every direction. Commercial nodes developed along the streetcar routes, with businesses providing a variety of goods and services to those living nearby or just passing through. Common businesses at these nodes included grocery and drug stores, tailors, and barber shops. Remnants of these small commercial districts are still found throughout Cole.

Maintenance facilities for the streetcar companies were also constructed in Cole. The Metropolitan Railway built their East Division car barn at E. 35th Avenue and Gilpin Street in 1892.

Streetcars were stored and maintained at the massive building, a prominent fixture in Cole until it was demolished in 2018. A 1940 building, constructed by the Denver Tramway Company next door to the carbarn, still stands at this location.

Early churches in Cole reflected the northern European origins of the neighborhood's residents. Among the oldest churches remaining in Cole are the Norwegian-Danish Lutheran church at E. 34th Avenue and Lafayette Street and the Swedish Lutheran Church at E. 38th Avenue and Franklin Street. Both buildings were constructed in the late 1880s and now serve as residences.

Figure 9 - Now condominiums, this building was constructed c.1890 as the Norwegian-Danish Lutheran Church. Discover Denver photograph.

Simpson Methodist Episcopal Church, named in honor of Bishop Matthew Simpson, was first established in 1882 at 38th and Lafayette streets. The congregation soon outgrew their building, and in 1888 purchased lots on E. 37th Avenue between Lafayette and Humboldt streets. The congregation met in the Swedish Lutheran Church at 1618 E. 38th Avenue while waiting for their new home to be completed.⁵ They moved into their new building the following year.

Annunciation Catholic Parish has a long history in Cole. Founded as St. Ann's at 38th and Delgany streets in Five Points, the church moved to Cole in 1890 after its original church was destroyed by fire. Services were held in the school building until a dedicated church building was constructed in 1907.⁶ In its early years, the Annunciation congregation consisted primarily of Irish, Italian, German, and Slavic parishioners and served the blue-collar Cole, Swansea and Five Points neighborhoods.

A school has existed at the northwest corner of E. 32nd Avenue and Lafayette Street since the earliest years of Cole. The 1887 Robinson Atlas shows the wood-frame Fourth Avenue School at this location. The more permanent Maria Mitchell School, constructed of brick and stone and named for the renowned American astronomer and educator, replaced it in 1898.⁷ The 1898 school was demolished in 1974 and replaced with the present Mitchell School.

Hyde Park School was built in 1889 at the corner of E. 36th Avenue and Franklin Street. Designed by architect Robert Roeschlaub, the school is now a designated Denver landmark. It was later renamed the G.W. Wyatt School after a former principal, George Washington Wyatt. The building is now home to Wyatt Academy, a charter school.

The Annunciation Catholic School has been a part of the Cole neighborhood since 1890. A three-story combined school and church was built at E. 37th Avenue and Humboldt Street, serving the neighborhood for nearly 80 years. The parish built Annunciation High School on the 3500 block of Lafayette Street in 1951. By 1968, the 1890 school was deemed unsafe and it was decided that the high school students would be bused to St. Joseph's School at 6th Avenue and Galapago Street and the younger Annunciation students would be taught in the former high school building. The 1890 school was demolished in 1970 and replaced with the Humboldt Apartments, built by HUD and the Archdiocesan Housing Committee.⁸

The rush of development seen in Cole in the 1880s and early 1890s came to an end in 1893 with the Silver Panic. According to The Fall & Rise of the Queen City of the Plains, a historic context developed for the Discover Denver project, during the Silver Panic "No sector of society was untouched by the depression, which affected Denver's economic, political, and physical development until the end of the decade."⁹ Little development activity occurred in Cole or, for that matter, the city, for the next decade.

Residential Development and Redlining

After the platting of Cheesman and Moffat's Addition in 1902, residential development quickly spread east of High Street. Most homes in the addition were constructed between 1902 and 1929, with styles and forms typical of the time. Simple Gable Front homes and Craftsman bungalows line the blocks, giving this part of Cole a very different feel than the western part of the neighborhood which developed decades earlier.

One important piece of the history of the Cole neighborhood, and Denver in general, concerns the availability of housing to nonwhite residents. Race restrictions in real estate transactions were common in the 1920s as a way of maintaining white exclusivity in parts of the city. While it was illegal after 1917 for municipalities to enforce race-based zoning ordinances, the real estate industry in many cities, including Denver, continued to attach race-based restrictions to real estate transactions.¹⁰ The Cole neighborhood was impacted by a practice known as “redlining,” in which mortgage lenders, based on standards created by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA), classified neighborhoods by race and ethnicity and refused home loans in areas they deemed less desirable and therefore less stable.

Denver’s Black population grew as a result of the Great Migration, which saw a substantial portion of the South’s African American population moving to industrialized cities in the North, Midwest, and West. In Denver, many of these newcomers moved to Five Points and the surrounding neighborhoods, including Cole. Covenants restricted minority home ownership in parts of Denver, including east of High Street in Cole. Historian Gwendolyn Wright shows that these policies and practices led to the deterioration of African American neighborhoods across the country, because residents of those neighborhoods were subject to predatory landlords and impossible housing markets, in which they were, in most cases, unable to sell their homes.¹¹

¹¹ Gwendolyn Wright, Building the Dream,

By 1938 the Residential Security Map, published by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, classified the area west of High Street in Cole as "hazardous," citing its large population of minorities and renters. It was not until 1965 that Colorado strengthened its fair-housing statutes in response to the civil rights movement, and middle-class African Americans were met with less resistance as they moved to other parts of the city.¹²

Other Development

Meanwhile, commercial development continued along streetcar routes in Cole. The Alpine Theater opened in 1925 at 3301 Williams Street, operating at this location until the mid-1960s. The Alpine was reportedly the only theater in Denver where African Americans could attend movies without facing discrimination.¹³

With a $160,000 grant from the Andrew Carnegie Foundation, Denver constructed multiple branch libraries throughout the city. The very first branch library, the East Denver Branch, was built in the Cole neighborhood at 3354 High Street. Designed by noted Denver architects Fisher & Fisher, the branch opened to patrons in 1913.¹⁴ In 1975, the branch was renamed the Warren Branch Library and moved to a larger, more modern building at 2825 High Street. The 1913 building became home to the Mt. Calvary Church of God in Christ, and in 2002 saw conversion into the Carnegie Lofts.

As part of a $12 million expansion program in the 1920s and 1930s, Cole Junior High, now Cole Middle School, was built in 1925 by Denver Public Schools.¹⁵ The school was designed by noted Denver architect William N. Bowman and named for Carlos M. Cole, who as Superintendent of Denver Public Schools was instrumental in establishing junior high schools throughout Denver.¹⁶

Long in the works, Annunciation Catholic Parish church was consecrated in 1907. The parish built a rectory next door at 3621 Humboldt Street, and in 1945 purchased the neighboring house at 3627 Humboldt, now used as an activity center.

Several other new churches were built in Cole during this period, including the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church, later known as Bethany Evangelical Lutheran Church, at 1631 E. 32nd Avenue (now Martin Luther King, Jr. Boulevard). Built in 1909, the church served the area's Swedish immigrant population into the 1950s. In 1912 a bungalow was built next door as a parsonage.

As the Simpson Methodist Episcopal congregation continued to grow, they built a new church in 1909 at 3401 High Street.

In 1909 the Denver Rock Drill Manufacturing Company, a manufacturer of mining drills, set up shop on thirty-five lots between E. 39th and E. 40th avenues and Williams and Gilpin streets, replacing the early lumber yards and planing mill. The company built out its industrial complex over the course of the next few decades, constructing a machine shop, laboratory facilities and a foundry, and receiving permission from the City to occupy the alleyways and right-of-way between its buildings. Through a 1927 merger, the company became the Gardner-Denver Company.¹⁷

Cole Neighborhood: 1930 to 1990s

Most of Cole was built out by 1930, with little new construction occurring between the Great Depression and World War II. Streetcar service ended in Denver in 1950, increasing the city's dependence on the automobile and impacting those relying on public transportation. Many businesses struggled as the once reliable steady stream of streetcar passengers disappeared. Construction of Interstate 70 just north of Cole in the early 1960s cut the neighborhood off from neighboring Elyria-Swansea and Globeville. Citywide, residents of Denver's older central neighborhoods began moving to the suburbs. Cole saw a shift demographically as long-time northern European residents moved out of the neighborhood and Latino and African American families moved in.

Businesses and long-time neighborhood institutions shifted to accommodate the demographic change. Bethany Evangelical Lutheran Church, which had served the Swedish immigrant population in the area for decades, was sold in 1957 to the Denver Gospel Hall, a predominately African American congregation. The congregation continues to worship from the building today. In a similar story, the Alpine Theater at E. 33rd Avenue and Williams Street closed in the mid-1960s and was sold to the Odom Memorial Church of God in Christ, another primarily African American Congregation. Annunciation Catholic Church saw the number of Latino congregation members swell. By 1970, the Cole neighborhood had an even distribution of Anglo, African American, and Latino residents.

The 1970s brought increased vacancy rates and crime to many of Denver's central neighborhoods, including Cole. In 1974, the city made efforts to stem the neighborhood decline and stabilize businesses by revitalizing the shopping center at Downing Street and Bruce Randolph Avenue.¹⁸ To support struggling residents, in 1976 Annunciation Parish purchased a grocery store at the southwest corner of Humboldt Street and E. 37th Avenue, partnering with a parish from Arvada to open the Twin Parishes Food Bank. Private efforts, such as that of "Daddy" Bruce Randolph, also helped support neighborhood residents. Randolph handed out clothes and food, helped people find work, and gave away free Thanksgiving dinners in what became a Denver tradition.

The 1980 census showed that Cole was among Denver's poorest neighborhoods. Concerned Cole residents pushed the city for assistance. Funding dedicated to revitalizing the neighborhood came in the form of federal, state, and local grants. A 1986 task force evaluated ways to revitalize Bruce Randolph Avenue, one of the neighborhood's main commercial corridors. The resulting Bruce Randolph Avenue Planning Report cited crime, deteriorating properties, and an uncertain economic climate for businesses as the main issues facing the corridor.¹⁹ Despite these efforts, crime and poverty continued to plague the neighborhood. The 1990 census showed that over one-third of Cole's residents were living below the poverty line.²⁰

Cole Today: 1990s to Present

Cole continued to struggle with crime and poverty in the early 1990s. Later in the decade, Denver's population began a steady increase that continues today. Blueprint Denver, a 20-year citywide land use and transportation plan implemented by the city in 2002, identified areas of the city as "areas of stability" where change was not wanted, and "areas of change," where development was desired. In Cole, much of the area north of E. 38th Avenue and along Downing Street and Bruce Randolph Avenue was defined as an area of change.²¹ It did not take long for these changes to begin.

The opening of a new light rail station and park-n-ride at 38th and Blake streets, just to the west of Cole, jump-started high density residential development in the northwest corner of the neighborhood. Walnut Street, zoned for eight stories, is now lined with hotels and apartment buildings, activating the northwest corner of the neighborhood.

As Denver’s population increased, housing prices rose across the city. Gentrification began to take hold in Cole as new residents moved to the neighborhood, seen as more affordable than many other parts of Denver. Modest bungalows and Victorian Cottages were razed to make way for boxy two and three-story townhomes. A 2016 study by Denver’s Office of Economic Development identified Cole as among the neighborhoods most vulnerable to involuntary displacement.²²

Between 2017 and 2020, the Platte to Park Hill Stormwater Systems project made improvements to Globeville Landing Park, the Park Hill Golf Course, City Park Golf Course, and along 39th Avenue through the Cole and Clayton neighborhoods. Intended to reduce flooding in the northeast part of the city, work in the Cole neighborhood required the acquisition and demolition of a number of buildings on either side of E. 39th Avenue from High to Franklin streets. The resulting 39th Avenue Greenway stretches through the Cole and Clayton neighborhoods along E. 39th Avenue from Steele Street on the east to Franklin Street on the west, with plazas, parks, and gathering spaces along the way.

6. RESULTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Summary

A total of 1,354 parcels were surveyed in the Cole survey area. Vacant parcels and buildings less than thirty years of age were surveyed at the Foundation level, while more information was gathered on those buildings that were over thirty years of age. 25 individual buildings were surveyed at the Enhanced level and were evaluated for historical, architectural, or cultural significance. Four areas were identified as having a concentration of buildings with architectural, cultural, or historical significance.

Survey Levels

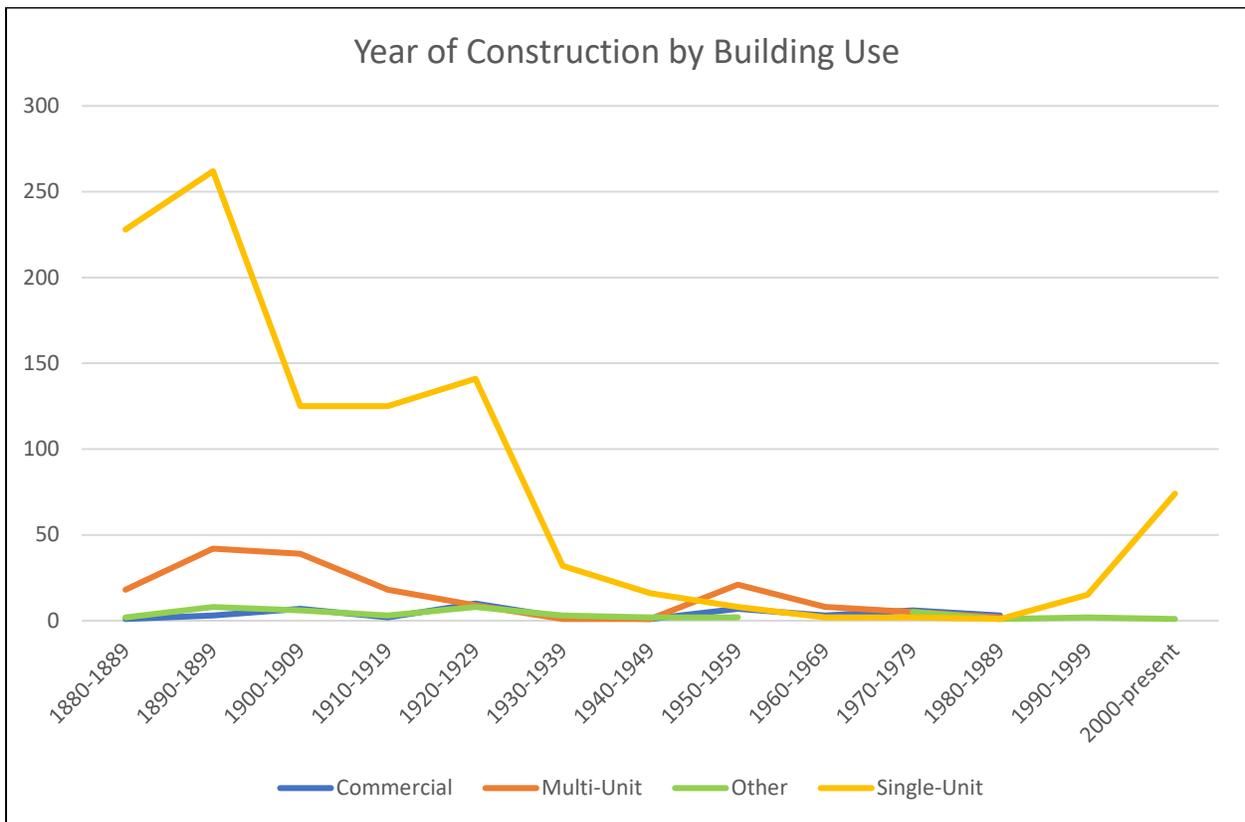

Parcels surveyed at the Foundation level are those that contain buildings less than thirty years of age or no buildings at all. Buildings surveyed at the Descriptive survey level were over thirty years of age but had major alterations. Those surveyed at the Evaluation level were over thirty years of age and were unaltered or had alterations that were considered minor or moderate. The majority of properties surveyed in the Cole survey area were documented at the Evaluation level. Buildings surveyed at the Enhanced level were researched and evaluated for architectural, historical, or cultural significance.

Survey Level	Description	Count
Foundation	Vacant parcels or less than 30 years old	162
Descriptive	Over 30 years old with major alterations	149
Evaluation	Over 30 years old with good integrity	1018
Enhanced	Evaluated for significance	25

Years of Construction

The vast majority (80.9%) of the buildings in the Cole survey area were built prior to 1930. Of these, 83.3% (n=881) were built as single-unit homes. Development tapered off after 1930, and was nearly non-existent in the period from 1950 through 1989. An uptick in construction began in 2000, concurrent with an increase in population in Denver.

Building Forms and Styles

For purposes of this report and the Discover Denver project more generally, a distinction is made between building forms and architectural styles. Building forms are generally identified by the organization of a building's plan and massing. For example, the Foursquare building form is so-called because it is organized, in plan, into four zones of similar size in a square configuration. On the other hand, architectural styles are identified by design features applied to the building. Like clothing, architectural styles come and go according to what is in vogue at any period in time. The Queen Anne architectural style, characterized by over-the-top detailing such as textured shingles, patterned masonry and spindle-work was "in style" between the late-1880s and late-1890s. After the turn of the century, few Queen Anne homes were constructed as homeowners opted for styles, such as Edwardian, with more classical elements.

It should be noted that the concepts of style and form are sometimes used interchangeably. For instance, in their A Field Guide to American Houses, Virginia and Lee McAlester note that the term "bungalow" was used in the early 1900s to describe small homes constructed in the Craftsman style and that it was only after 1920 that the bungalow was understood as a type to which other styles could be applied.²³

Likewise, some buildings may have a building form but no clear architectural style. Such buildings are documented by Discover Denver with the appropriate form and an architectural style of "No Style."

Architectural Styles

In the Cole survey area, the Discover Denver team observed twenty-five architectural styles, as well as numerous examples of buildings that, while carrying no specific style, exhibited identifiable stylistic elements. The following tables present the most commonly observed architectural styles in the survey area.

Building Forms/Types

The Discover Denver project documented 30 different building forms in the Cole survey area, with an additional 56 buildings documented as “Other” in the building form field because they did not fit any of the identified building forms in the database. Many of the buildings documented as having an “Other” form had poor historic physical integrity.

The following building forms and/or types are presented within Single-unit, Multi-unit, and Commercial categories and are present in sufficient quantities to be considered character-defining for the Cole survey area.

Single-Unit Residential Building Forms/Types

The majority (75%) of buildings in the Cole survey area were documented as single-unit homes. Nearly 59% of these were of the Gable Front or Bungalow form, building forms which were quite common in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Other single-unit buildings were distributed across other identifiable types/forms.

Properties Evaluated for Significance

Of the properties documented during field survey (no designated properties were recorded), 2.9% (N=34) were documented as having no alterations visible from the public right of way. Additionally, 84.2% (N=1004) were documented as having minor or moderate alterations (e.g., window replacement or subordinate rear additions) indicating that, while they may be too altered to be individually architecturally significant, they carry sufficient historic integrity to easily convey their history to passers-by and still have the ability to contribute to the historic landscape of the survey area.

Of the total buildings recorded in the survey area, 25 buildings or 2.1% percent were selected for Enhanced survey. In most cases buildings were selected because field observations supported the possibility that they might be architecturally significant. In a few cases, property owners or community members informed surveyors in the field that the building had aspects to its history that might indicate historical or cultural significance. The following table lists the buildings evaluated at the Enhanced level, along with their determinations of eligibility at the local, national, and state levels.

This list should not by any means be considered a complete list of potentially significant properties in the survey area; more data than was available from right-of-way survey would be required to make that determination. Any building in the neighborhood for which sufficient historic physical integrity and historic, cultural, or geographical importance can be shown should be considered to be potentially significant.

Areas of Significance

For the purposes of the Discover Denver project, an “Area of Significance” is identified as an area having a concentration of buildings in which most buildings retain their historic physical integrity and have the ability to convey a shared history. Overall, buildings across the Cole survey area have fair to good physical integrity, with the newer (1910s to 1930s) eastern side of the neighborhood retaining stronger integrity than the older, western section (1880s to 1900s). A large number of buildings in the survey area have undergone typical changes in exterior materials and window replacement. Redevelopment is beginning to encroach upon the neighborhood from the west and northwest, with newly built 21st century multi-unit complexes and large residences replacing older buildings with increasing frequency. While Cole has a strong concentration of worker housing and small cottages, this historic housing stock is threatened with considerable new construction in the neighborhood.

Five areas of significance were identified in the survey area, each having good physical integrity and a unique story to tell about the history of the Cole neighborhood.

Area of Significance #1: Blocks of Bungalows

Area of Significance #1 is an irregularly shaped area on the eastern edge of the Cole survey area. Included in the area is the National Register-listed Cole Historic District, which encompasses the 3200 and 3300 blocks of Race and Vine streets. The homes were built from the 1910s to the 1930s, much later than the late-19th century Victorian Cottages seen in the western part of the neighborhood. The majority of the homes are Craftsman-style bungalows, though there are a few English Norman Cottage, Colonial Revival, Minimal Traditional, and ranch homes scattered throughout.

3400 Vine Street (1914)

3515 Race Street (1929)

3601 York Street (1932)

3200 Gaylord Street (1907)

Area of Significance #2: 3500 and 3600 Blocks of Humboldt

Area of Significance #2 consists of the 3500 and 3600 blocks of Humboldt Street. The west side of the 3500 block of Humboldt features a row of Classic Cottages while the east side of the block is filled with Victorian Cottages, often built as worker housing. The 3600 block of Humboldt is more eclectic, with Terrace type residences and Victorian Cottages, along with a large Romanesque Revival church and two-story commercial building that dominate the streetscape. These buildings date from the 1880s to the early 1900s.

3533 Humboldt Street (1900)

3516 Humboldt Street (1888)

3637 Humboldt Street (1890)

3601 Humboldt Street (1904-1907)

Area of Significance #3: The Heart of Cole

Area of Significance #3 is the heart of the Cole neighborhood. The irregularly-shaped area includes the former streetcar commercial district at the intersection of Bruce Randolph Avenue and Franklin Street, as well as the 1940 Denver Tramway trolley car storage facility. Homes north of the commercial corridor are a mix of styles and types dating from the 1880s to the 1910s.

3400-3412 Franklin Street (1890)

1526 E. 35th Avenue (1888)

Area of Significance #4: Denver Rock Drill

Area of Significance #4 is the Denver Rock Drill site, an industrial complex occupying a two-block area from W. 39th to W. 40th avenues and Franklin to Williams streets. Multiple buildings date to the early 1900s with historic additions constructed as the company expanded operations. Denver Rock Drill was the premiere rock drill manufacturing company in the early 20th century. While most of the buildings are industrial, many of those fronting W. 39th Avenue and Williams Street have detailed architectural elements including patterned brickwork, engaged piers, and decorative entryways. The original railroad spur for direct rail access to the property still exists. The complex was determined eligible for the National Register by the State Historic Preservation Office in 2001.

Area of Significance #5: Provident Park

Area of Significance #5 is located in the northwest corner of the Cole neighborhood and is made up of some of its earliest buildings. The area is roughly rectangular shaped and consists of the 3700 and 3800 blocks of Franklin, Gilpin, Williams, and High streets. This area features many architectural styles and forms consistent with the early settlement of the neighborhood, as well as some later infill. Construction dates range from the mid-1880s to the mid-1950s. Early buildings represent worker housing, while buildings from the 1940s and 1950s addressed the massive need for housing post-World War II. The area was determined eligible as a National Register Historic District in 2018. Since that time there has been new construction which has impacted the integrity of the area, including the construction of the 39th Avenue Greenway, which cuts from east to west through the northern third of the area. While most of these houses have seen some level of modification over the years, primarily with new windows and cladding, the area is largely intact and can still tell the story of the working-class people who lived and labored in Cole.

Conclusion

The Cole neighborhood is one of the oldest in Denver, with most buildings constructed before 1930. Many streets are lined with single and multi-unit residences built in the late-19th century for workers employed by the nearby stockyards, smelters, and railroads. Evidence of Denver's early streetcar system also remains in Cole in the form of embedded streetcar commercial districts and buildings constructed by the streetcar companies.

While Cole was largely unchanged for many years, over the past two decades that has started to shift. Significant high-density development is occurring in the northwestern corner of the neighborhood, while throughout Cole substantial two-story single and multi-unit residences are replacing older bungalows and Victorian Cottages.

Despite this redevelopment, pockets of buildings still exist throughout the neighborhood that have seen little change and that have the ability to convey the neighborhood's story. Additionally, a number of individual buildings remain that have significance in their own right. The hope is that through the work of Discover Denver, residents and visitors to Cole will be able to identify and value the resources that remain, and that they may be preserved for years to come.

8. SURVEY LOG

Evaluations made as a part of this survey project are intended to assist city staff, property owners, and other interested parties with understanding a property’s potential significance. These evaluations may be revised in the future should additional information be discovered, or if the property no longer retains its historic physical integrity.

A determination of significance or eligibility does not formally designate a resource as a historic landmark or put any restrictions on it. Designation would require a significant level of community support and the successful completion of a rigorous public process.
